

Jonas Thomas House
Bartonsville
Private

In 1858, the community of Bartonsville did not exist as evidenced by the Bond Map of Frederick County. But by 1873, Bartonsville numbered twenty houses, a "temple", a store, and "colored" school. Two churches were later built for the community in the 1880's. The appearance of the community during this time period certainly indicated a community built by freed slaves immediately following the Civil War. It is not known however, why this particular area was settled as a Black community.

The Jonas Thomas House appears to have been built by 1873 and is indicated as the home of J. Bowens on the Titus Atlas. A title search of the property shows that Bowens purchased six and one-fourth acres from Henry Houck on June 19, 1865. He owned the house until his death in 1876 at which time his heirs sold the property to Jonas Thomas for $500.00.

The interior of the main block is divided into two square rooms separated in the center by a partition. Located in the center of this partition is a fireplace on each side. Each fireplace is decorated by a plain wood mantel with plain frieze, simple mantel shelf with double half round molding surrounding the opening and frieze. Plain baseboard and molding frame the door openings in the main block of the building. A plain open string stair rises to the second floor along the west wall.

The building is significant to Bartonsville as one of the oldest structures in the community and though it is in poor condition is an important part of the history of the post-Civil War Black Community of Bartonsville.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Jonas Thomas House is a two story log hip roofed ell shaped residence which faces south from the north side of Bartonsville in the Black community of Bartonsville. Initially the house appears to have little significance, but upon closer inspection and through research, the building can be considered an important part of Bartonsville.

The main entrance, a replaced two horizontal panel door with top light is located in the second bay. The building is three bays wide.

Occupying the remaining two bays on both levels are replaced Victorian 2/2 windows. The original windows, double hung 6/6 sash, were installed in the rear and added in 1935.

The main block is one room and one bay deep. One double hung 6/6 window is centered in the second level on the north and south walls of the main block. The main block is constructed of horizontal logs covered with asbestos siding.

A two story frame addition added in 1935 extends to the rear of the main block. The addition is one bay wide and one bay deep with double hung 6/6 windows occupying each bay on each level. A two story open porch is attached to the addition on the east side. One door on each level enters into the rear addition of the house.

The entire building is constructed on a low random stone foundation and is covered by a replaced asphalt hipped roof with exposed rafters. A single brick chimney rises from the center of the building. A plain dormer with four pane window extends on the south side of the roof. A single brick exterior chimney rises from the north end of the house.

A corncrib is located on the premises in poor condition.

The interior of the main block is divided into two square rooms separated in the center by a partition. Located in the center of this partition is a fireplace on each side. Each fireplace is decorated by a plain wood mantel with plain frieze, simple mantel shelf with double half round molding surrounding the opening and frieze. Plain baseboard and molding frame the door openings in the main block of the building. A plain open string stair rises to the second floor along the west wall.

The rear addition accommodates a kitchen on each floor.

Jonas Thomas, grandfather of the present owner of the house, is believed to be the builder of the house by the Bowie family, his heirs in the Bartonsville Community.

The building is significant to Bartonsville as one of the oldest structures in the community and though it is in poor condition is an important part of the history of the post-Civil War Black Community of Bartonsville.

Upon the death of Jonas Thomas the house was left to his heirs and stays in the Bowie family (Mary Ellen Thomas Bowie) today.
